

EXECUTIVE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME

Managing at the Top – Programme for Permanent Secretaries, Chief Executive Officers and Heads of Public Organisations

Strategic leaders and top-level managers need to continuously improve their capabilities in order to remain relevant to the challenges of contemporary governance. They must think strategically, manage the complexity of policy making in government, and competently rise up to a growing public demand for better services. At the same time, today's leaders must overcome the challenge of managing and sustaining change in their organisations in the face of an increasingly uncertain future.

This programme is designed to strengthen strategic leadership capacity in the public sector. Drawing on concrete cases and lessons of experience, it will explore the issues faced by those who have to manage at the highest level in government, expose useful perspectives for dealing with those issues, and detail relevant management ideas and approaches based on international best practice. The programme will enhance participants' skills and competencies for leading senior leadership teams, taking initiative, organising and providing policy advice, and delivering better public services. Further, the programme will empower participants to more effectively manage their relationship with political appointees while building productive collaborations and networks for ethical leadership.
